Learn all about Activision See all about Activision More of Duty Mobile has a confirmed release date about the call, but while we wait that, the game's publisher, American Activision, has released some relevant new information about the entry of its long-standing first-person shooter franchise on smartphones. The first battle is about Royal Mode: Call of Duty: Like Black Ops 4, mobile games will also feature multiplayer based on today's most popular online combat genre. According to Activision, the mode brings together elements, locations and maps from across the franchise and combines them with survival-based gameplay. There will be 100 players competing on a huge map, competing solo, doubles or progressing into groups of four people. (Image: Disclosure/Activision) The size of the map is greatly emphasized by Activision, which, in addition to ensuring conflict on the ground, sky and sea, confirms the presence of several vehicles to speed up transportation between essential points of the localities: the transportation confirmed by the company so far includes a Jeep, an SUV, a helicopter and a tactical dinghy. Before the clash, the team's players can designate two members belonging to the operator class, with special items for combat assistance. Ah, the company also confirmed maps that will be part of the game: firing range, crash, standoff, shipment, killhouse, overgrowth, newtown, launch, countdown, estate. Other maps are also included, but names have not come. (Image: Disclosure/Activision) In addition to Battle Royale mode, Activision has confirmed other modes, already known to fans of the series, such as Team Deathmatch, Search and Destroy and Free-for-All. All modes give rewards for each player's performance, and they can be used to unlock characters and weapon senders for iconic games in the franchise such as modern warfare and black ops series. There's also a third mode, which Activision promises to announce soon: Canaltch risks a kick and says Zombies. Call of Duty Mobile is already in beta testing in some areas such as Australia, and should soon be expanded to other markets. There's still no official release date, however. Did you like that story? In the new mode, the same player only faces 150 other players to try to be the survivor. The gameplay is still the same, but winning on its own becomes even more challenging, with no partner to revive it in Team Battle Royale mode. It's worth remembering that the game is available for free download on PlayStation 4 (PS4), Xbox One and PC (Battle.net). Call of Duty: Warzone is a success and already has more than 15 million totals in just four days after the launch. The brand is phenomenal and surpasses any other title of the same genre or multiplayer in general. 1st Call of Duty: Battle for Warzone Lone Wolves receives Royale Solos mode - Photo: Game/Activision Call of Duty: Warzone Lone Receives Battle Royale Solos Mode for Wolves - Photo: Breeding/Activision Want to buy games, consoles and other discounted products? Compare TechAll is another traditional version of the Meet Battle Royale style from the new mode, similar to PlayerAConau's Battleground (PUBG). Players need to be more attentive to their radar, gunfire and doors of buildings that can report that other participants have already passed through there. The map remains the same as other modalities and when a user is eliminated, there is still a chance to return to the match through a 1-to-1 duel in Gulag. However, after finishing in Gulag, the match comes to an end, with no chance of resuscitation. New details of Call of Duty: Warzone Battle, free to play Activision's New Battle Royal, revealed today. The game will be a standalone and apparently brings a very generous map, with 200 players competing with each other and a cherry on the cake: completely free. The Warzone battle hasn't been officially announced for now and the information is from an alleged video leaked on YouTube (which has since been removed) and an ad on the PlayStation network. Details indicate that the title will be cross-platform and can be officially announced very soon. In innovation are a mini Royal mode, a faster version with fewer players than standard, in addition to access to stadium and train station exploration. The game also receives upgrades for weapons and other unlockable items. It's good to create a place to install Season 5 before you talk about some news of the update. According to Activision and Infinity Ward, if you already have the latest version of Modern Warfare and Warzone, the update will be 33.9GB on the PS4 and 49.8GB on the Xbox One. For those who play on PC, it will be 54.2 GB if you have modern warfare, and 47.4 GB if you only explore Warzone.Mini Royale, new areas and more itemone of the features of this season 5, according to the Activision release trailer (below), is a major change in the central area of the map. Thanks to a subtle explosion on the roof at the stadium (also seen in the trailer), players will be able to locate and face each other inside the venue. It will be interesting to see what strategies people will use, especially to take advantage of different levels of stand. In addition to the stadium, which will now have more extensive utility than serving as a playground for campers with only snipers, Season 5 will also feature a train that will run across the map. Of course you will presumably be seen fast by opponents, but I believe someone would think of something very good to justify putting a goal in your head. A new faction comes into play, called Shadow Company, and it's ok he's responsible for blasting coverage of the stadium. Players will have access to new maps, including a multiplayer called Petrov Oil Rig, for 6 vs 6 conflicts. Warzone players will be able to play modern war multiplayer for free from August 7-12. Mini Royale promises to make matches faster by reducing the number of opposing players at a time (standard mode goes up to 150). This will require the player to be in constant motion and make quick decisions. In this framework, there will be fewer events as well, limiting themselves to those that usually happen in the first and final five minutes of a traditional match. The equipment that can be found has been updated. According to Activision, players will have the opportunity to find variations of tool rarity from type maps: 8 common, 13 unusual, 15 rare, 19 epic and 25 mythical. You'll be able to find new wartracks, that is, songs you can listen to while driving. The new operator skins will be available as well. Ah, it's always good to remember: Call of Duty: Warzone is free to play. With information: Engadget and Venturebeat Call of Duty: Warzone is the latest free battle royale from Activision, announced on Monday (9), which comes to all players on March 10 for the PlayStation 4 (PS4), Xbox One and PC. Initially, there are two modes of the game: loot, focused on collecting money; and Battle Royale, which puts up 150 players to face each other. Contrary to what was disclosed in previous rumours, Cod: Warzone is a game of its own, i.e., the release is different from modern warfare. Call of Duty: Warzone is available from 4 p.m. ET, but users who have Call of Duty: Modern Warfare can start playing from 12:00. 1 of Duty: Warzone will be a free Battle Royale game for all - Photo: Play/Activision Call of Duty: Warzone will be a free Battle Royale game - Photo: Want to buy Sports/Activision games, consoles and other discounted products? Meet the compare with Techdedo the manufacturer did not give many information about what the rules of your Battle Royale mode would be, but you can see some traditional features of the subgenre in the trailer, such as skyquering on a large open map. The map is called Verdansk and according to Actives, there are more than 300 points of interest. The players will be divided into trio as well as apex legends. The video also shows a variety of vehicles, such as quadricycles, cars and helicopters, which should make the movement from the map quite dynamic. In loot mode, participants aim to collect money at different map locations. Each player carries the money of their earnings and, upon being shot, another user can steal the amount. There is also a way to accept contracts - that is, missions that pay money if the player can complete them.
